SCHOLLAERT CHANNEL AND DALLMANN BAY

Schollaert Channel is between Anvers Island on the southwest and Brabant Island on the northeast, connecting Dallmann Bay and Gerlache Strait, in the Palmer Archipelago. It was discovered in 1898 by the Belgian Antarctic Expedition under Gerlache, who named it after Francois Schollaert (1851-1917), a Belgian statesman. Paradise Bay is one of two harbors in Antarctica discovered by Belgian seaman Adrien Gerlache (the other being nearby Neko Harbor) and is home to a pair of naval bases: the Argentinean Base, Almirante Brown, named after the father of the Argentine Navy and the Chilean base, Gonzalez Videla, which honors the first Chilean president to ever visit the frozen continent. While the site is now inactive and primarily used as a tourist stop, two researchers made history here almost 90 years ago. As part of a British Imperial Expedition, M.C. Lester and Thomas Bagshawe spent a year in Paradise Bay from 1921-1922. They reportedly lived inside an abandoned old whaling boat, studying the life of penguins, the descendants of which probably still nest in the ruins of the same shelter today.

ESTIMATED ANTARCTICA CRUISING SCHEDULE

Celebrity Infinity is expected to arrive into Antarctica at approximately 3:00pm. Sailing times are subject to change depending on pilots, weather conditions, wind, visibility, currents and environmental operations. For further updates, please listen to Captain's Morning Announcement at 9:45am. Additionally, please refer to the navigational updates with Celia and Alejandro at 12 Noon and 2:00pm in the public address system indoors around the ship and on TV Channel 1 in your stateroom for more information. Travel distance from Paradise Bay to Elephant Island is approximately 329 nautical miles.

Upon our arrival in Antarctica, your Cruise Director Alejandro and our Celebrity Activity Speaker Celia Garland will provide navigational updates and some narrations about the scenery from the navigational bridge. Please be advised that no announcements will be broadcasted on open decks in Antarctica waters in order to minimize the disturbance to wildlife in this region. The narrations can be heard in all public venues indoors around the ship and on TV Channel 1 in your stateroom.

INTERNATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF ANTARCTICA TOUR OPERATORS (IAATO) REGULATIONS

As part of IAATO regulations and our "Save the Waves" policy, it is strictly forbidden to throw anything overboard. Please be careful not to drop or throw any litter overboard. Secure any food packaging and personal items when out on deck to avoid them being blown overboard. Decomposition is slow in cold climates and animals can get entangled in or poisoned by litter. Antarctica is the largest wilderness area on earth. Please help to keep it that way.
